LEGAL RESOURCES

ACLU of New Jersey

Attn: Intake Mail Manager
P.O. Box 32159
Newark, NJ 07102
Office: (973) 642-2084
Website: www.aclu-nj.org
Online Complaint Form: www.aclu-nj.org/legal/fileacomplaint/onlinecomplaint.htm
E-mail: info@aclu-nj.org

The ACLU of New Jersey (ACLU-NJ) is a private, non-profit organization devoted to defending the principles of freedom, justice, and equality outlined in the Bill of Rights of the United States Constitution. ACLU-NJ is involved in litigation and advocacy on behalf of individuals and lobbies on scores of bills in the state legislature and local councils.

The Legal Department reviews all of the complaints it receives, looking for issues with which the ACLU may be able to help. Some of the issues the ACLU looks for include freedom of speech, freedom of religion, government-sponsored religious activities, privacy, illegal discrimination, reproductive rights, police misconduct, censorship in schools or libraries, student rights, workplace privacy, and inhumane jail and prison conditions.

The ACLU provides information to thousands of people each year to assist them in asserting their rights. Sometimes the ACLU refers people to other organizations that may be able to help. Sometimes the ACLU acts as advocates for individuals and takes cases to court. However, the ACLU can provide direct representation to only a small number of clients each year in cases with the potential to set legal precedents for the preservation or advancement of civil liberties.

The ACLU is not a government agency or a general legal services organization. The ACLU does not dispense general legal advice, provide emergency services, or make referrals to attorneys. In general, the ACLU does not assist in criminal defense, post-conviction appeals, divorce or child custody disputes, property disputes, tax problems, consumer complaints, landlord/tenant disputes, or complaints against lawyers or judges. If your problem falls in one of these areas, you should look for other resources or organizations for help.

To obtain information or ask about assistance, contact the ACLU by letter. Your letter should address all of the questions listed below. In writing your letter, you should give a clear chronological account of your difficulty, with an emphasis on the facts of the situation.

To help you, the ACLU needs these facts:

- Describe in your own words what happened to you, including dates, places, and the names of the people directly involved.
- How were your rights violated?
- What explanation, if any, was given for what happened?
- Why do you think this happened to you?
- What steps have you taken to solve the problem (filed an appeal or complaint with the parties involved or with any public agency or official, or any other organization)?
- To whom did you complain and where does the matter currently stand?
- What documentation do you have on the matter?
- Please note that if you have an attorney assisting you with this matter and she or he believes there is a significant civil liberties issue involved, you must have your attorney contact us directly.

Attach copies of any important documents to your letter. Never send original documents. Do not simply send the ACLU documents or copies of letters to or from other organizations. The ACLU will not respond unless you send a cover letter written by you explaining what the problem is and how the documents are important.

The ACLU receives many complaints every week and answers every letter it receives. Letters should be mailed to the ACLU at the address above. You can also fill-out the online complaint form.

The Office of the Ombudsman, New Jersey Department of Corrections provides assistance to prisoners with problems and complaints. The office functions independently of the state prison facilities to ensure the development of trust, confidentiality, and objectivity between Ombudsmen and prisoners. Ombudsmen are expected to be alert and to follow through on any violation of due process; to observe that basic living standards are met; to be especially responsive to all allegations of staff brutality; and to observe searches and crisis situations as required.

JDI has directly contacted each organization listed in the Resource Guide in hopes of pointing survivors toward those currently accepting new clients. However, the inclusion of any group or individual in the Resource Guide does not necessarily constitute an endorsement or recommendation by JDI, nor can JDI guarantee the availability of the services described here.
