AIDS Action Committee of Massachusetts, Inc. (AAC), New England's first and largest AIDS organization, is dedicated to stopping the spread of HIV/AIDS by preventing new infections and optimizing the health of those already infected. AAC provides free confidential services to men and women already living with HIV/AIDS in the Boston area, as well as conducts extensive educational and prevention outreach to those at risk of infection. AAC runs the only statewide AIDS Hotline, Hepatitis Hotline, and Pharmacy Access Hotline. All Hotlines offer support in Spanish and in English. Free and confidential rapid HIV testing and counseling is available at AAC's downtown Boston location and at its MALE Center in Boston's South End neighborhood.

AAC's client services include: advocacy; legal services; transportation; rental assistance; support groups; counseling; residential housing services; HIV treatment information; clothing vouchers; and free tickets to shows. AAC also operates the HIV Health Library and provides information, support, and referrals for HIV+ prisoners throughout Massachusetts by mail or by phone. AAC also produced a unique booklet for HIV+ women, "A Guide On the Inside," which covers taking medication, confidentiality, side effects, and a host of other topics. Prisoners can write or call AAC directly for a copy of this booklet or for information and support. All AAC client services are free and confidential.
